Do “The Professors” do policy? re: U of L and Abortion

Taken from EMW’s own website: (The state’s only abortion clinic.)

Here’s EMW in its own words . . .

“EMW has refused to back down in fighting for women’s access to constitutionally PROTECTED, SAFE and DIGNIFIED reproductive health care.

There continues to be tremendous challenges across the country — here in Kentucky, anti-abortion politicians continue to pass unconscionable laws.

EMW Women’s Surgical Center has legally challenged the state of Kentucky on many pieces of legislation that proposed dangerous and restrictive laws trying to limit a woman’s choice to have an abortion.

Kentucky patients do not need to face more restrictions and obstacles when making their own personal and private decisions related to family planning.”

Concerns and take-aways . . .

- EMW (apparently with their Professor/Physicians’ support) has “refused to back down in fighting for women’s access . . .”
- They face “tremendous challenges” from the “anti-abortion politicians who continue to pass unconscionable laws.”
- EMW’ and its Professor/Physicians have “legally challenged the state of Kentucky on many pieces of legislation that proposed dangerous and restrictive laws . . .”
- And, (apparently these EMW’ Professor/Physicians know best, because EMW asserts) “Kentucky patients do not need to face more restrictions and obstacles when making their own personal and private decisions related to family planning.”

Yes, they are active in policy.
